2014 was a year of active peace and social justice work on the part of Friends throughout the Northwest. Besides what each meeting, worship group and individual Friends have engaged in, our committee has taken on two important actions. First, we endorsed a request by Columbia River Tribes that they be involved in federal policy-making on the environment of the Columbia River along with other religious organizations. We joined with the Washington State Committee Against Torture and other groups nation-wide, strongly urging the release of the U.S. Senate Select Committee’s report on torture resulting in its public report.

Our goal has been to share with one another, gathering and strengthening our Quaker voices in the region.
